

Suggested Generic Allocations for some Japanese Molluscan Species

A. Myra Keen*

Abstract

The Cardiidae, Vermetidae and Marginellidae species with a type locality in Japan or Sakhalin and Kamchatka are listed and generic allocations suggested.

Some 40 years ago the late Professor Hubert G. Schenck began a project at Stanford University of setting up card files on the species in certain families. These files are now too bulky to publish in their entirety, but extracts on a regional basis, citing the named species in terms of modern classifications, may be useful. The present paper covers, for the Japanese area, the Cardiidae (my speciality during much of this time); the Vermetidae, on which I have also published; and the Marginellidae, the speciality of two students, Dr. Eugene V. Coan and Mr. Barry Roth, who have made this part of the paper available.

These are not complete check lists, for forms with a type locality in the Indo-Pacific province, ranging north only into southern Japan, are not included. Rather, the emphasis is on species with a type locality in Japan or in the area immediately to the north (Sakhalin and Kamchatka). The card files were accumulated by canvassing the annual volumes of the Zoological Record; by scanning the periodical literature received by the Geology Department library at Stanford; and by study of reprints that Japanese colleagues have generously supplied. Even though an attempt was made to be thorough, doubtless many names were overlooked. The present lists are offered only as a kind of progress report. Probably many of the named species will prove to be synonyms as Japanese workers review the fossil and Recent literature and have opportunity to study additional collections. Obviously this summary is not the place for such revisions. However, synonymies that are cited in recent Japanese literature are indicated.

The classification for the Cardiidae is in general that which has been published in the "Treatise on Invertebrate Paleontology" (Keen in Moore, 1969), with slight modifications. The classifications for the Vermetidae and Marginellidae are those that will be used in the forth-coming gastropod volume of the "Treatise." Preliminary revisions on these groups have appeared: (Keen, 1961; Coan & Roth, 1966; Roth & Coan, 1968).

Format in the lists is as follows:

Arrangement of genera and species is alphabetical under family and subfamily headings. For generic and subgeneric taxa, name of the author and date are given. For each specific entry the order is: generic taxon here suggested as appropriate; author of specific name; date; the original generic name in square brackets if this differs from present allocation; notes on spelling errors or synonymy; age (especially for fossil forms). A question mark before an entry indicates uncertainty because the available figures do not show all features needed for positive decision.
